Thirteen (13) new journals make their debut

We are happy to announce the debut of 13 new journals under our imprint. When the company celebrated its twentieth anniversary in 2023, part of the internal conversations we had was whether it was time to open up the journals to non-African themes. The consensus of opinion at that time was that we should first consolidate our Africa- themed journals by expanding beyond our initial focus on the social sciences, humanities and business studies. It should be recalled that our first journal was African Renaissance which we started in 2004 while the second was African Journal of Business and Economic Research which made its debut in 2006

Expanding beyond our initial focus on the Social Sciences, Humanities and Business Studies

Until 2022 when we started a journal in Law, (i.e. African Journal of Law and Justice System, which is now indexed by SCOPUS), our journals grew only through unbundling of new journals from our existing journals, mostly from African Renaissance and from African Journal of Business Renaissance (since 2024). In 2023 (the same year the company turned 20), we decided to expand into Public Health with a journal called, African Journal of Human Kinetics, Recreation and Health Studies. We were so impressed by the reception the journal received that in early 2024 we began to research and lay the foundation for new journals that would cover the natural sciences, technology, engineering and medical sciences. This was a very audacious undertaking that figuratively broke the backs of all those involved. We are very grateful to the editors of the journals, the contributors, the reviewers, our ever dutiful staff, and all who helped to make the debut of these journals possible. We are very grateful, and promise to do our best to continue to uphold and even exceed, the very high standards for which our journals are known.

Are we trying to play catch up with the big boys from the global North?

With the 13 new journals, we now have a total of 40 journals under our imprint (click on List of our 40 journals in alphabetical order). This has led to some people asking whether we are trying to play a catch-up with the big boys in the industry such as Taylor & Francis which publishes over 2,700 journals. Our answer is that while we are inspired by what the ‘big boys’ have accomplished, we are consciously running on our own lane. We are however mindful of the fact that the sheer number of journals published by the major players from the global North (compared to the paltry number published by the few journal publishers from the global South) illustrates the disparity in knowledge production and dissemination between the two halves of the global divide. This is what some people have called ‘bibliometric coloniality and epistemic inequality'. We are happy that our journals are ranked across the four main categories of ranking by Scimago Journal Ranking (SJR) – Q1, Q2, Q3 and Q4. If our modest efforts with these journals contribute in bridging the asymmetry in knowledge production and dissemination between the two divides, we would have achieved a big part of our mission.
