

Editorial Note

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.31920/2978-347X/2026/v1n2a0>

Hesham Farhoud MD

Editor-in-Chief

African Journal of Medical Research (AJMR)

It gives me great pleasure to present the third issue of our journal.

First and foremost, I extend my sincere gratitude to the members of the Editorial Board, our dedicated reviewers, and our publisher for their unwavering support, professionalism, and commitment to excellence. Your efforts are the backbone of this journal's progress.

I also wish to thank all authors and contributors to this issue. This edition reflects the growing diversity and depth of research in our field. Within these pages you will find a wide range of scholarship - from case study and cross-sectional studies, to narrative review of literature, as well as systematic reviews and meta-analysis. This variety speaks to the richness of the work being done and the high standards we continue to uphold.

I am especially proud of the effort and dedication shown by everyone involved in bringing this issue to publication. Each manuscript represents countless hours of research, revision, and peer review.

As we continue to evolve, we are delighted to see our journal attracting more authors, more contributors, and a wider readership. This growth motivates us to maintain quality while expanding scope, and we look forward to building on this momentum in future issues.

With appreciation,

Hesham Farhoud MD
Editor-in-Chief
AJMR